Modern global financial crisis has demonstrated the necessity to define the criteria and conditions to form complicated social-economical systems. The process of social-economical development of society is difficult and needs the appropriate system of interaction and cooperation of heterogeneous systems, the activity of which is targeted at satisfying the growing needs of population.

Cooperation between different participants of re-production is carried out in the process of social-economical systems management by defining and providing the consensus of economy subjects interests. The co-ordination of goals and tasks of social-economic heterogeneous systems integrates and units management system and its elements. This fact contributes to immediate dynamic connection between management structure, mechanism and process. The hierarchical construction of this system that can be characterized by special attitude towards its elements predetermines the organization of management process. Because of that it is necessary to define the concept "management process".

In economic literature devoted to the analysis of management process maintenance, different approaches are revealed. The author suggests that the essence and content of management processes could be reflected by the aggregate of certain approaches: methodological, substantial, informational, organizational.
